Carlson Wagonlit Travel and American Express Global Commercial Card Sign Preferred Supplier Agreement

AMSTERDAM, NEW YORK, July 9, 2008 — Carlson Wagonlit Travel (CWT) and American Express Global Commercial Card (American Express) have signed a multi-year, preferred supplier agreement, the two companies announced jointly today. CWT will promote and distribute three American Express payment solutions—Business Travel Account, Corporate Card and Corporate Meeting Card—to its clients and prospects in 21 countries.¹

CWT selected American Express for its global footprint, high-quality products, extensive data, and flexibility. CWT clients will also enjoy the following benefits:

- Companies can consolidate their card programme across countries and regions to facilitate expense management.
- Lodge, individual, and meetings and events cards are supported, offering greater visibility and control over travel-related expenditures.
- The solutions are flexible and can be adapted to clients of all sizes in all market segments. Furthermore, customised options for billing, consolidation of charges and payment are available.
- The cards are accepted by airlines, hotels and ground transportation suppliers around the world.
- Companies can offer rewards and incentives to individual cardholders for greater employee satisfaction.

In addition, CWT and American Express will be able to provide greater value to mutual clients by delivering enhanced data and reporting consolidated on a local, regional and/or global basis. Clients who implement CWT Agency+Card Reporting will gain even better insight into their travel and expense data by being able to compare and match actual credit card expenditures with CWT transactions. This will enable clients of both companies to optimize the management of their corporate card and travel programmes.

Mike Koetting, CWT executive vice president, Global Supplier Management, said, "American Express offers best-in-class payment solutions around the world. Many of our clients are already using their cards and are looking forward to the enhanced data which, when coupled with CWT Agency+Card Reporting, can provide increased visibility and understanding into travel-related expenditures. Thanks to this broader view, companies can increase compliance and more effectively leverage negotiations with suppliers for greater savings. We are eager to offer similar opportunities to an even greater number of our clients and are confident that with the help of American Express, the transition will be seamless."

Brendan Walsh, senior vice president, American Express Global Commercial Card, Europe, added, "We're very pleased to have signed this agreement with Carlson Wagonlit Travel. As their preferred payment provider, we will be able to enhance our service to mutual clients, as well as expand our relationship with new clients in many markets around the world. It reinforces our global strength in offering corporate payment solutions to the travel industry, supporting our goal to offer clients best-in-class service, savings and control.
