CWT Programme Management Center Wins Innovation Award at Business Travel Show in London

UK, February 12, 2008 — Carlson Wagonlit Travel (CWT), the world's leading travel management company, announced today that the CWT Programme Management Center, a Web-based central gateway providing travel managers and buyers with easy access to the information and performance metrics they need to optimise their travel programme, won a 2008 Innovation Award at the Business Travel Show held in London last week. The distinction was made in the Travel Services Category.

Developed exclusively by CWT, the CWT Programme Management Center has enabled more than 10,000 travel management professionals in nearly 100 countries to simplify and prioritise their activities and more effectively manage their travel programme since its launch in April 2007.

Customisable dashboards, zoom-in and zoom-out capabilities by geography and by organisational hierarchy, carbon emissions reporting, traveller health and safety alerts, and an interactive map for locating travellers in the event of an emergency are among the key functionalities of this multi-lingual, multi-currency programme management tool.

Commenting on the award, Loren Brown, CWT executive vice president, Technology and Product Management, said, "We are particularly honoured to receive this award, since the voting was done by travel management professionals. When you see the CWT Programme Management Center, you can't help but be impressed by the depth and flexibility of its content and its functionality."
